Faculty Development and Teaching Assessment: Closing the Loop

Presented by Dr. Fawn Winterwood
Thursday, February 19th
1:00pm-2:00pm
236 E. Town St., Columbus, OH 43202
Room 003

At most colleges and universities, both faculty development and teaching assessment occur, but they exist and function independently. When each of these programs operates in a vacuum, faculty members are unable to experience the full benefit of either. Franklin University’s International Institution for Innovative Instruction proposes a model for integrating these two very important aspects of supporting the development of excellent teaching faculty in order to enhance student learning. With this model, faculty and their universities are able to close the development-assessment loop to make the most of their investment in each of these processes. This brief presentation will overview the model and its theoretical underpinnings, as well as a vision for implementation.

Space is limited, please RSVP early
The presentation will also be available to view live at http://video.franklin.edu/Franklin/FranklinTV2014/livefeed.html
Follow us on Twitter @i4_FranklinU! Live tweet this event using #i4closingtheloop

Dr. Fawn Winterwood earned her Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy degrees from The Ohio State University, both in Educational Policy and Leadership. She holds a Bachelor of Arts in Anthropology from Indiana University. She has two decades of experience in education, including administrative and instructional roles. At Franklin University, she works to develop defined processes, standards, and professional development opportunities for assuring consistent quality in online as well as face-to-face courses.

Fawn enjoys wood turning and dancing in her “down” time.